1. The airfield located near the slaughter house of Kaunas (23°55'E/54°09'N), Lithuanian S.S.R., was occupied by transport and fighter aircraft. Bomb release and air-to-ground firing practice was occasionally observed from a distance. It was observed on three occasions during the summer of 1948 that 60 twin-engine aircraft with fighter escort flew over the town.
2. The airfield itself was seen only from a distance. It is located about 600 meters north of the slaughter house on the southern perimeter of Kaunas. Destroyed hangars and a small two-story brick building were located in the southern section of the field, the western section of which was difficult to see.
3. About 20 single-engine fighters, low-wing monoplanes with in-line engines, and eight to ten twin-engine low-wing monoplanes with double rudder assembly and slim fuselage were stationed at the field.
